The allocation of the menhaden resource is a recurring contentious issue in Rhode Island. This symposium will examine the current information available about menhaden, including menhaden life history, history of the menhaden fishery, current coast- wide stock assessment, current stock assessment for Narragansett Bay, and the ecological value of menhaden. A panel discussion to discuss resource allocation will follow the presentations.

This workshop is cosponsored by Rhode Island Sea Grant and the R.I. Department of Environmental Management Division of Fish and Wildlife. This workshop is free and open to the public, but space is limited, so advance registration is required.
